What is Gen Z OrodistA?

Gen Z OrodistA is not just a generation or a political group; it is a global ethical identity. It refers to young people who have realized that the old world, its exhausted institutions, corrupt politics, censorship, ecological destruction, and structural injustice, can no longer protect the future.

Gen Z OrodistA means seeing the world through the lens of Orodism, an ethical philosophy built on three core principles:

- Love of Existence (life, nature, truth)
- Love of Humanity (dignity, solidarity, empathy)
- Love of Freedom (expression, choice, freedom from fear and domination)

This identity has emerged across streets, digital spaces, art, universities, and youth resistance movements, from Nepal to Morocco, from Latin America to Europe and beyond.

How can someone become an OrodistA?

There is no registration, membership card, or central authority. Becoming an OrodistA is an ethical choice, not an organizational one. It happens through three simple but profound steps:

1. Put ethics before tribes
   Before nationality, race, religion, or party, ask yourself:
   Does this defend existence, humanity, and freedom?
2. Refuse silence
   When you see injustice, censorship, or the dehumanization of others, do not choose indifference.
   Writing, sharing, art, testimony, and active empathy are all forms of action.
3. Act decentralized, but in solidarity
   You do not need to join an organization. It is enough to know you are not alone—and that when one voice is silenced, another must speak louder.

If these principles resonate with you, then you are already OrodistA, even if you have only just learned the name.
